It was during my voyage back from Asia that I watched dumbfounded as a crab crept aboard and cracked open a monkey nut with his pincers – the sweet smell that wafted into my nostrils sent a craving for a naughty nibble. I myself indulged in a few peanuts, followed by a caramel I found in my overcoat, and the combination was so marvellous I forgot about my sea queasiness!

And so the Sailor's Cure Salted Peanut Brittle was born – splendid!

No further reasons are needed – find your cure via the link in bio.

mrstanleys During an expedition to the Cape of Good Hope our boat sprung a leak – it could have been devilish if it weren't for mine and the good chap African Giraffe's quick thinking to plug the hole with a sticky caramel toffee – huzzah!

Of course, we celebrated our cerebral abilities with a nice glass on the rocks!

To remember the occasion, I created the buttery perfection that is my On The Rocks Caramel – the perfect amount of chocolate and sea salted caramel toffee. I truly pushed the boat out with this magical creation!

Try them for yourself, you'll find them in the link in bio.

mrstanleys Butterfingers was a friendly nickname I gave to my first-mate during my venture to Australia, when fishing off the back of the ship he'd forever drop the slippery chumps back into the sea. HAH!

But nowadays the only butterfingers around here are mine – smooth with the residue of my scrumptious creamy fudge! With 18% butter, these luxurious morsels melt away in the mouth. Glorious!

Find out for yourself via the link in bio.
